

The Picnic That Flew Away

a Gigi & Mimi adventure

This adventure belongs to

“And was it a good picnic? The best.”

A complete story. A tiny treasure. Their name on the front.

THE STORY

Gigi and Mimi packed the perfect picnic. Sandwiches. Apple slices. Two cookies. A little bottle of lemonade. And one enormous red picnic blanket.

They spread the blanket beneath a tree. “This,” Gigi announced, “is excellent picnic weather.”

WHOOSH! A gust of wind lifted one corner. A napkin flew. Then another. Then Gigi’s hat. “My hat!”

The hat rolled across the grass and stopped beside a blue envelope. FOLLOW THE BREEZE.

Near the fence, Mimi found a yellow ribbon fluttering from a post. They chased a napkin around a tree — and right back to their blanket. Even the cookies were safe.

Mimi looked at the yellow ribbon. Then at Gigi’s slightly crooked hat. “The best.”

And this time, before they ate their cookies, Mimi placed one rock on every corner of the picnic blanket. Just in case the breeze wanted another adventure.

IN YOUR ENVELOPE

- A tiny blue envelope that says FOLLOW THE BREEZE
- A yellow ribbon
- A red gingham picnic square

EXPLORER MISSION

Have a mini picnic (a cracker will do). Let the ribbon “blow” to another room. Follow it. Put a pebble on each corner of your napkin so the breeze can’t steal it.

FOR THE GROWN-UP

Grown-up whisper: indoor picnic on the living-room floor works beautifully. The blue envelope is the invitation. No real wind required.
